

THE INTERACTIVE MUSE

PIANO IMPROVISATION IN THE 19TH CENTURY

OCTOBER
16-19
2024

October 16
University of Cassino, Aula Magna
15.00 – 18.00

October 17
Sapienza University of Rome, Aula Pirrotta
9.30 – 13.00

October 17 – 19
Accademia Filarmonica Romana, Sala Casella
October 17, 15.30 – 19.30
October 18, 9.30 – 13.30 and 15.00 – 19.30
October 19, 9.30 – 13.30 and 15.00 – 21.00

THE DOUBLE IDENTITY OF EUROPEAN MUSIC
IMPROCOMP.ORG

SAPIENZA
UNIVERSITÀ DI ROMA
DIPARTIMENTO DI LETTERE
E CULTURE MODERNE

UNIVERSITÀ DEGLI STUDI
DI CASSINO E DEL
LAZIO MERIDIONALE

TOR VERGATA
UNIVERSITÀ DEGLI STUDI DI ROMA

ACCADEMIA
FILARMONICA
ROMANA

Improvisation, once an essential constituent of a pianist's life and work during the so-called Classical period, in the Nineteenth century underwent a slow decline and transformation, until it disappeared almost completely in the Twentieth century. Not everything was lost, however: the practice of preluding before the performance of a musical work continued during the Nineteenth century and beyond and is well documented by coeval sources.

Through the improvisation of a prelude, the interpreter would interact creatively with the music she or he was about to perform, thus establishing a deeper connection with the audience. Several live (but not studio) recordings by pianists active in the first half of the Twentieth century, such as Wilhelm Backhaus and Dinu Lipatti, attest to the survival of the art of preluding, as well as the willingness of interpreters to extemporize modulations and stylistic and textural transitions between pieces in a concert program.

As for today, most interpreters are extremely reluctant to revive these practices, partly because the expectations of audiences and professionals are increasingly modelled on the recording industry's standards, partly because of the insufficient familiarity with historical performing practices. The greatest obstacle, however, is represented by the training of musicians: whereas in the past improvisation was integral to piano pedagogy, today the teaching of repertoire is still based on the modernistic idea of a more or less mechanical reproduction of the score.

Western art music is a tradition based not only in the reproduction of written scores but also in non-written practices. In order to revitalize them, it would therefore be necessary to explore the possibility of bringing improvisatory practices to new life. Most historical evidences are obviously lost, but not the possibility of exploring those spaces in the musical work where the performer's creative intervention is possible, as it was in the past. In regaining those spaces, we don't 'betray' the score: rather, we recognize its implicit potential as bearer of stimuli that may allow the interpreter to bring it in relation with the contemporary era.

Integrating musicological research and performance, The Interactive Muse project aims to open a discussion on these issues, as well as to test new teaching methods for bygone practices. It will include theoretical sessions, live performances and panels with scholars and musicians, in addition to three workshops on piano improvisation in the Nineteenth century. Three teachers - Costantino Mastroprimiano, John Mortensen e Giorgio Sanguinetti - will work with ten pianists, chosen through an international competitive selection, on the following fields: historically informed performance; early Nineteenth century partimento; sources of improvised preludes in early Romantic piano music; techniques of improvisation in the Romantic era, with special regard to improvised prelude and interlude.

wednesday, october 16 – University of Cassino, Aula Magna

15.00 – 18.00

Greetings from the Rector of Cassino University, Marco Dell'Isola

Greetings from the Director of the Department of Humanities, Sebastiano Gentile

chair Gianluca Bocchino (Università di Cassino)

Costantino Mastroprimiano (Conservatorio di Perugia)
Chopin and the art of starting a piano piece

Giorgio Sanguinetti (Università Tor Vergata di Roma)
Patterns, stratagems and their transformations in Chopin's music

ore 16:30

IMPROVISED CONCERT

Concert by John Mortensen (Cedarville University, Ohio)

PRELUDE

thursday, october 17 – Sapienza University of Rome, Aula Pirrotta
9.30 – 13.00

PREMISES

Greetings from the Director of the Department of Modern Humanities and Cultures, Marco Mancini

Greetings from the President of the Accademia Filarmonica Romana, Paolo Baratta

Greetings from the President of the Graduate Program in Musicology, Andrea Chegai

chair Franco Piperno (Sapienza Università di Roma)

Susanna Pasticci (Sapienza Università di Roma)
The interactive muse: The text and its performance

Stefano Oliva (Università Niccolò Cusano)
From text to gesture: improvisation and atmosphere

Andrea Ravignani (Sapienza Università di Roma & Aarhus University, DK)
Mind and brain in musical performance and improvisation

Emanuele Ferrari (Università di Milano-Bicocca)
Traces of improvisational matrix in the piano repertoire

Giovanni Bietti (RAI RadioTre, Lezioni di musica)
"This must seem improvised!" Writing and improvisational gesture in Chopin thursday, october 17 – saturday, october 19

Accademia Filarmonica Romana, Sala Casella
Workshop Piano Improvisation in the 19th Century

october 17
Workshop 1
15.30 – 19.30

october 18
Workshop 2
9.30 – 13.30
15.00 – 19.30

october 19
Workshop 3
9.30 – 13.30
15.00 – 16.30

TEACHERS

Costantino Mastroprimiano (Conservatorio di Perugia)
John Mortensen (Cedarville University, Ohio)
Giorgio Sanguinetti (Università Tor Vergata di Roma)

SELECTED PARTICIPANTS

Matilde Bianchi (Conservatorio di Bologna)
Roberto Cornacchioni Alegre (Universidade de São Paulo)
Julian Jenson (Temple University, Boyer College of Music, New York)
Javier Liébana Castillo (Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Stuttgart)
Danilo Mondaca Rivera (Pontificia Universidad Católica de Chile, Santiago)
Lucio Perotti (Conservatorio di Perugia)
Lorenzo Pusterla (Conservatorio di Milano)
Sam Shortall (Maynooth University, Ireland)
Basil Vandervort-Charbonneau (Université de Montréal)
Daniel Vidal (Palau de la Música Catalana, Barcelona)

ACTIONS

saturday, october 19 – Accademia Filarmonica Romana, Sala Casella

17.00 – 18.30

Plenary session

Is a new way of enjoying piano music possible?

REFLECTIONS

chair Stefano Jacoviello (Università di Siena & Accademia Musicale Chigiana)

PARTICIPANTS

Gilda Buttà (Conservatorio di Frosinone)

Sandro Cappelletto (Istituto per l'Enciclopedia Italiana Treccani)

Paola Carruba (Vicedirettrice di Radio RAI)

Matteo D'Amico (Accademico di S. Cecilia, Roma)

Domenico Turi (Accademia Filarmonica Romana)

saturday, october 19 – Accademia Filarmonica Romana, Sala Casella

20.00

POSTLUDE

THE INTERACTIVE MUSE

Concert by Workshop participants

The Interactive Muse is organized by the Department of Letters and Modern Cultures of Sapienza University of Rome, in collaboration with the Accademia Filarmonica Romana and the universities of Cassino and Rome Tor Vergata, as part of the Research Projects of National Relevant Interest Improvisation/Composition: The Double Identity of European Music (PRIN 2020), coordinated by the university of Pavia: <https://improcomp.org/>

The outcomes of the workshops will be discussed in a session at the conference Performing Classics Today: The Role of the Performer in the Actualization of Music, organized by the Accademia Musicale Chigiana in Siena, 4-6 December 2024.

SCIENTIFIC COORDINATION

Susanna Pasticci (Sapienza Università di Roma)

ORGANIZATIONAL COORDINATION

Ludovico Peroni (Università di Cassino)

Maria Valentini (Università di Cassino)

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER

Filomena Valente (Università di Cassino)

info@improcomp.org